E&ENews PM -- Wed., October 19, 2011 -- Read the full edition

1. SOLAR: U.S. panel manufacturer accuses China of trade violations

An American solar panel manufacturer asked the federal government today to impose duties on China for allegedly dumping its silicon solar cells on the U.S. market in what is being touted as the largest trade case ever in the renewable energy industry. SolarWorld Industries America Inc., the largest U.S. producer of crystalline silicon solar cells and panels, filed petitions with the Department of Commerce and the International Trade Commission that also accuse the Chinese government of subsidizing Chinese manufacturers through illegal contract awards, trade barriers, financing breaks, supply-chain subsidies and other tactics.
